Iyashino sato

Iyashi no Sato (いやしの里) stands on the site of a former farming village on the western shores of Lake Saiko. The village was destroyed by a landslide during a typhoon in 1966. Forty years later the village's traditional thatched roofed houses were reconstructed and reopened as an open air museum and traditional craft village where people can learn about the culture and try out and purchase different local handicrafts.

Takayama old Town

Takayama's old town has been beautifully preserved with many buildings and whole streets of houses dating from the Edo Period (1600-1868), when the city thrived as a wealthy town of merchants. The southern half of the old town, especially the Sannomachi Street, survives in a particularly pretty state with many old homes, shops, coffee houses and sake breweries, some of which have been in business for centuries. The shops in the area are typically open daily from 9:00 to 17:00.

Asakusa & Sensoji

Sensoji is the spiritual home of Tokyo's ancestors. This Buddhist temple was founded over 1000 years before the city started. Today it remains an alluring, lively atmosphere redolent of Edo (old Tokyo) and the merchant quarters of yesteryears. The colorful Nakamise street arcade is approaching the temple complex overflow with vendors selling snacks and souvenirs.
